The Buncha chair – Keilhauer’s first nesting chair – complements the table range with a striking palette of colors, and options including castors and a foldaway tablet top

April 24, 2019 (Toronto) – Make the most of your space, with Buncha – a new collection of modern office furniture from Keilhauer. Ideal for training rooms, but equally at home in meeting rooms or other shared spaces, Buncha introduces a range of custom tables and a space-saving nesting chair designed to fit to your space and style.

“Every office environment has unique needs – from the size of the space to the way that people use it – so why take a ‘one size fits all’ approach to the furniture you need to get the job done?” said Mike Keilhauer, President, Keilhauer. “That’s the philosophy behind Buncha – a straight forward collection that can be easily configured to ensure that your office furniture works for your unique situation.”

The Buncha Table (designed by DSA Todd Babick, made by Keilhauer) offered in seven different shapes and a variety of sizes – including squares, rectangles, circles, and ovals in a range of depths and lengths, to presentation tables and conference corner pieces. In all, Keilhauer offers more than three-dozen combinations of shapes and sizes, in a variety of tabletop and leg finishes.

Each table features simple, clean lines for a modern look, plus a durable and attractive laminate top that’s easy to clean. Tables may be customized with in-table power bars, featuring cables and cords safely and stylishly tucked out of the way inside the legs. Tables may also be fitted with castors to make them even easier to move. Select models may be fitted with front modesty panels.

The Buncha Chair (designed by Aaron Duke, made by Keilhauer) is Keilhauer's first nesting chair. When deployed, it's a comfortable and stylish design available in a range of colors. The chair rests on a four-leg aluminum base and casters and may be customized with an optional laminate tablet top for easy note-taking. And when it's not needed, the chair takes up minimal floor space, thanks to a fold-up seat that allows the chairs to nest together with no lifting required.

What's more, all furniture in the Buncha collection has been sustainably designed with the forward thinking, environmentally conscious office in mind. Keilhauer believes the health of people is directly related to the health of the product, which is why the company's designers, engineers and sustainability experts work closely to ensure that all products are developed with the utmost care for its employees, its customers and the environment. All of the materials used in Keilhauer products are assessed against a number of rigorous hazard lists to ensure that they only contain benign, healthy, materials that are safe for the people who will use them.

The Buncha collection is manufactured without the use of PVC, Red List chemicals or flame retardants that produce off-gassing and are a contributing factor to poor air quality. Buncha tables achieve BIFMA LEVEL 2 certification and seating achieves BIFMA LEVEL 2 certification and SCS Indoor Advantage Gold for indoor air quality. The products are also manufactured using recycled material and Forest Stewardship Council® (FSC® C117042) Certified wood, ensuring the materials used contribute to the sustainable management of the world's forests.

Like all Keilhauer products, the Buncha collection is built with the highest quality materials and is manufactured to last. The collection is also designed to enable the highest recovery of materials, meaning the products can be disassembled and recycled with ease to support the conservation of natural resources, save energy, and contribute to a sustainable economy.
